

Creating a Blended Learning Strategy

Successfully implementing a blended learning program requires analysis and thoughtful planning. To create an effective, comprehensive plan:

- Work to identify your district's three biggest challenges over the next one to two years.
- Outline your goals – knowing what you want to achieve with your blended learning program is paramount because, as you experience the ups and downs of introducing a new program, revisiting the strategic goals will help you remain focused and grounded.
- Identify technology tools and online programs that can help you address your challenges or goals.
- Determine your budget and funding resources.
- Create a timeline and set of expectations for your blended learning program implementation.
